Three File for Supervisor Post; 6 for Road Job

Last Day for Withdrawal Is March 6; Town Election April 6

Eleven candidates for the four vacancies occurring in Antioch township this year had filed their petitions with Town Clerk C. F. Richards on Tuesday, which was the final day for filing such petitions.

Three seek the office of supervisor, the post to be vacated by Supervisor Barney Naher after an eight year tenure of office. The candidates to be his successor in office are Louis Pregenzer, junior partner in the dredging contracting firm with his father, Ray Pregenzer, and present Republican central committeeman of precinct 1; Fred J. Berg, chief clerk of the Lake County Rationing board at Libertyville; and William A. Rosing, former supervisor, who is senior member of the firm of Rosing & Son, of the Antioch Garage.

Rosing is now sojourning at Hot Springs, Ark., but will return in time to make a campaign for the office he formerly held. Berg, who has been active in civilian defense affairs since Pearl Harbor, today removed all doubt as to his earnestness in the campaign by requesting, and having granted, a leave of absence from his duties with the rationing board in order to conduct his campaign for the township's most important office. Pregenzer is already active in promoting his campaign.

Six for Road Job

The township vote, approximately 1500 votes in normal times, will be split six ways among the candidates for highway commissioner, the post held for several years by Carl Barthel. Growing private business prompted Barthel to announce his retirement at the close of his present term, expiring this April 30.

The candidates to succeed him are Robert Webb, Jack Wolf, Ralph Fields, Walter Chin, Nicholas Zeien and Thomas Runyard.

Two for Library Board

Petitions have been filed also for Dr. R. D. Williams and Mrs. Eleanor Michel for re-election to the Antioch Library board of trustees.

A special ballot in connection with the library election will carry the proposition to increase the tax for library purposes from 1.2 mills to 2 mills, as provided by law.

Legion Auxiliary Observes Fifteenth Anniversary Friday

The fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the Antioch American Legion Auxiliary was celebrated here Friday night with a dinner at Mortensen hotel which was attended by 36 Auxiliary members and husbands. A huge birthday cake decorated with the American flag adorned the dinner table when the guests dined at 6 o'clock.

Following the dinner cards were played with prizes going to Mrs. George Garland and Mrs. Chris Mortensen in the bridge games; Mrs. Sadie Keeney and Walter Hills, 500; and Mrs. Olive Tweed, Mrs. Eva Burnette, Mrs. Clara Horton and Lester Heath were winners in the pinochle games.

Founded fifteen years ago, Mrs. Lillian Jensen was the Auxiliary's first president. Following her in succession as head of the organization were Mrs. Ethel Pesat, Miss Elizabeth Webb, Mrs. Mary Chase, Mrs. Rosalie Anderson, Catherine Rhienke, Mrs. Eva Kaye, Mrs. J. L. Horan, Mrs. Betty Mortensen, Mrs. Agnes Hills, Mrs. Ruth Ward, Mrs. Ethel Zimmerman, Mrs. Myrtle Klass, Mrs. Helen Osmond, Mrs. Anna Harden, and Mrs. Eva Burnette, this year's president.

Inspection Cards for Renewal of Gas Cards

Many holders of B and C gas ration cards have neglected to return their tire inspection certificates with their applications for renewal of their gas cards, the County Rationing Board reports. All applications for renewals should be accompanied by the tire inspection reports. Time limit for tire inspections of holders of B and C cards expired on Feb. 28, but holders of A cards have until March 31 for tire inspection, board members said.

Ration Calendar

Gasoline A-Book Coupon No. 4 expires March 21. Sugar, Coupon No. 11 (3 pounds) expires March 15. Coffee Stamp No. 25 (1 pound) expires March 21. Tires—Class A—First inspection deadline March 31st. Fuel Oil—Period 4 coupons expire April 6 in Zones C and D; April 12th in Zone B, April 17 in Zone A.

RATION BOOK ONE IS STILL AVAILABLE. Any person who did not register for War Ration Book One before January 15, 1943, may get it from his local War Price and Ration Board after February 22nd, provided the necessary application has been examined and approved.

Red Cross Drive for War Funds Starts Monday

Chairman W. I. Scott Effects Organization for Township

Plans for Antioch township's part in the special Red Cross drive to raise funds for increasing war relief needs got under way Monday night at a meeting held in the village hall, when Chairman Walter I. Scott announced committee leaders and mapped out the zoning of the township for a quick canvass of the area which will get under way on Monday.

The quota set for Lake county is $44,000, which is a part of the nationwide quota of $125,000,000. National quota for Red Cross war relief last year was set at $50,000, but greater need this year calls for extra funds and more sacrifice on the part of citizens on the home front. The local drive is expected to be completed within two weeks, Chairman Scott said.

Announce Committees

Mayor George H. Bartlett and State Deputy Fire Marshal James Stearns have been placed in charge of donations from the schools of the township, and they will have the aid of teachers and principals, Scott said.

Other committee members include: House-to-house canvass of township—Mrs. Ed. Vos and Mrs. Herman Rosing, who will have the assistance of rural residents in the several zones. Ed Vos will have charge of solicitation from industries, and Elmer Rentner and Clete Vos will make solicitations from business firms and their personnel.

The State Bank of Antioch and the First National Bank have been named as depositories for the fund, and both banks will receive contributions directly. Names of donors will appear in the Antioch News.

Need Greater Than Ever

Stressing the greater need for providing the American Red Cross with a greater fund than ever before, Chairman Scott today pointed out that the Red Cross is the only non-military organization operating within military and naval reservations. It is the liaison between the people and the soldiers who fight to defend them. Wherever U.S. fighting men go, there also the Red Cross goes.

"In peacetime many persons have been satisfied to become members of the Red Cross by subscribing the minimum membership of one dollar," Scott said. "Surely, this year, few of us will be content to make such a contribution necessary the disposal of a dozen A. E. F.'s to the far corners of the world, has multiplied many-fold the work of our American Red Cross."

The entire public is invited to the meetings, including those living in towns and cities of Lake county. The subject of "Victory Gardens" will be of special interest to urban people as well as to rural families.

"Breaks of Game" Against Locals in Final Seconds of Game

Local Veterinarian to Appear

Dr. G. W. Jensen will also appear on the program to explain the new method used in the immunizing swine against hog cholera and will also explain to farmers how to guard against such diseases as necro, enteritis, and swine erysipelas.

A very interesting sound film on swine growing will be shown.

All farmers interested are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Runyard were in Elgin, Ill., Monday afternoon as guests of Mrs. Runyard's sister, Miss Ira Baldwin, who entertained at dinner for their niece, 2nd Lt. May E. Werrbach, Army nurse, of Camp Grant.

Stepping out of their class to meet the strong Maine Township High school team in the regional basketball tournament at Waukegan, the Sequoits lost a "heart-breaker" last night and with it their chance to participate in the semi-finals to be played tonight.

With five points to the good and only a minute and a half to go, a foul was called on an Antioch player, the opposition winning the throw and adding a few quick points, the final score showed—Antioch 29, Maine 31.

Thus Maine stayed in the tourney and has New Trier as its opponent to-night in the semi-finals along with the two other winners of the preliminaries—Niles and Libertyville. The winners of these two games will meet in the final Friday night in the Waukegan High School gym. The winner will move into the sectional tournament.

(Antioch High school has an enrollment of 200, while the student body at Maine Township High school numbers over 2000. Coach Wolfson had only 18 players available for basketball.)

Coach Wolfson's Sequoits moved into the regional tournament with a record of 17 victories and five defeats. The team scored 771 points, with Barnstable the main point-getter with 305 in 21 games and Fields was second with 171 for the season.

District Champs.

The Sequoits made a brilliant record in the district tournament played last week at Wauconda.

First swamping Northbrook in the preliminaries, 27 to 19, in the Wednesday night game, they then defeated St. Mary's of Des Plaines the following night, 38 to 31. That victory moved them to the final game with Barrington, which had also survived the prelims and the semi-finals by defeating Ela and Wauconda. The score in the final—Antioch 28, Barrington 21.

Press reporters who saw the game said the Sequoits displayed plenty of gameness in winning the conflict as they trailed 10 to 1 midway in the first quarter. At the end of the quarter it was 10-5 in favor of the Bronchos. Then Dale Barnstable, brilliant star of the Antioch squad, who had been out of the game with a severe leg injury for several weeks, came into the game at the start of the second quarter, and it is said his presence steadied the locals considerably. The half ended 12-11 in favor of the Sequoits, and the locals moved to a 21-15 advantage going into the fourth period. Fields, forward, and Kaufman, guard, each scored seven points, while Barnstable tossed three free throws and a field

2,453 Register Here for Ration Book No. Two

Number Exceeds the Sugar Rationing Last May by 148

Registrations for war ration book No. 2 closed here Friday night with a total of 2,453, the number exceeding the sugar registration total of last May 7 by 148. Registration in the county was slightly under 40,000.

Ration book No. 1 may still be obtained by making application to the county ration board, and it was announced that there will be another day for producing ration book two, date to be announced.

Registration for war rations of all kinds was placed in the hands of township supervisors with public schools designated as places of registration. Here, as in most other townships the job was turned over to the school principal who set up the machinery to handle the job.

During the four-day session here, Principal Richard Whitaker received valuable aid from Mrs. A. G. Simon, president of the local P. T. A., and its members as well as from the grade school teachers and other public-spirited women of the community.

Principal Whitaker today expressed appreciation to the fifty registrars who assisted with the registration. The personnel included the following who assisted in four-hour shifts during the four days:

OPA Thanks Press

According to Associated Press reports, Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown paid tribute to the American press for its "invaluable assistance" in explaining canned goods rationing.

Brown said the service deserved special recognition in view of the difficulties of newspapers these days with paper, manpower, and transportation shortages.

Brown's tribute to the press was contained in a letter to Arthur T. Robt., editor of the newspaper trade magazine, "Editor and Publisher."

"No finer single service in the interest of the American public has been performed during this war than the splendid handling by the ration press of the OPA processed foods rationing program," the letter said.

Helpful Citizens

Similarly, the publication by newspapers of the official table of point values for March makes it possible for millions of housewives to plan their family's meals and shopping trips in advance. And here also is accomplished great saving of time for the country's 600,000 food stores and the shopper herself...

"For the invaluable assistance freely given by a free press of a free country, may I express the deepest gratitude of the Office of Price Administration."

Food Will Win the War, Speaker Declares

"Food will win the war," Col. John N. Gage, of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot, told members of the Antioch Business and Professional Woman's club and their guests at the Antioch Grade school Monday night.

Col. Gage explained how the quartermaster corps provides food for America's vast army, which is the best fed army in the world. He explained the process of making and the use of dehydrated foods, and the army emergency rations, mainly the A, B, D and K groups, and had various rations on display.

A large crowd attended the meeting to which the public and the various organizations of the community had been invited.

GET YOUR COAL SUPPLY

Because certain kinds of coal are now difficult to obtain, those planning to convert to coal should make arrangements of obtain their supply before starting actual conversion. Coal consumers are urged to place orders for their entire next winter supply immediately, to accept the coal as it can be delivered, and to place it in protective storage during summer months when production and transportation are more readily available.

To Curb Union Racketeering

During his recent lecture under the sponsorship of the Columbia University Institute of Arts and Science, William H. Davis, Chairman of the War Labor Board, recommended legislation to curb racketeering and to make public the financial records of recognized trade unions.

Specifically, Mr. Davis suggested that all unions certified by the government as collective-bargaining agents be required to embody in constitutions provisions for the democratic election of union officers. Together with a limitation on the term of union officials to two years, this, Mr. Davis told his audience, would go far to prevent control by racketeers.

He recommended also that the financial records of unions certified as bargaining agencies be thrown open to public inspection like the records of corporations. The "small, struggling unions" not recognized for bargaining, Mr. Davis said, should be exempt from such a regulation.

Why union racketeering has been permitted has been a mystery to most of us for a long time. Possibly something can be done about it now that the WLB head has agreed that the need for its correction is so urgent.

WOMEN AT WAR

Leonora

Leonora straightened the objects on her desk with great care. She had put her desk at the end of her room facing the door so that when her mother came in she would have to cross the whole room under Leonora's storm executive eye to get to her. From movies and pictures in the newspapers Leonora had gotten a good idea of how the desk of a busy woman of affairs should look.

With an important scowl, Leonora picked up a sheet of paper. Now she was two people—herself, the busy woman, and her own stenographer. "Miss Simpkins, take a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, will you?" she murmured under her breath.

"Yes, immediately," she murmured back at herself.

Leonora cleared her throat and looked at the ceiling for inspiration. Miss Simpkins bent over the sheet of paper hanging on the words about to fall. "Dear Mr. Morgenthau," "Got that?" "Yes, madam."

"I am—alien—thirteen years old and anxious to be of all possible service to the country at this time, then!"

"I earn a weekly income of from $1.37 to $2.12 by helping with the housework and by shoveling snow. I am at present in possession of one War Savings Bond and am buying stamps weekly. I want to become a member of the 10 percent Club. I feel it to be—ahem—not only my duty, but my privilege!" How do you spell privilege?" asked Miss Simpkins. "Don't bother me with these details," said Leonora—my privilege as an American to invest at least ten percent of my income in War Bonds.

Yours truly,"

"Get that off at once, Miss Simpkins," said Leonora. "Yes, Ma'am! You certainly are an important woman, ma'am," said Miss Simpkins.

Schools Open Drive
To Buy 10,000 Jeeps

THE little jeep which is serving so nobly from Guadalcanal to Africa has become the symbol of the gigantic efforts of millions of American school children in their War Savings program.

Thousands of public, private and parochial schools soon will be displaying a certificate of honor from Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., signifying that they have paid for at least one jeep by buying $900 in War Stamps and Bonds.

Countless others will be flying the Schools At War banner awarded to schools with 90 percent pupil participation in War Savings.

Ten thousand jeeps and a hundred bombers! This is the new goal of America's schools as 30,000,000 children continue their Schools At War program under the auspices of the Treasury Department and the U. S. Office of Education.

Results so far in the program reported by Dr. Horner W. Anderson, Associate Field Director in charge,

More Than "Flashes of Genius"

The Supreme Court recently held that a new device "must reveal the flash of creative genius" to be patentable. Inventors, manufacturers, and lawyers alike contend that this is a false standard of invention, the National Association of Manufacturers points out in a publication, "Industry's View on Patents and Postwar America."

Should such an interpretation be applied as the common standard, every patent now in existence as well as those yet to be granted is threatened. Genius is there, it is true, but some of our most valued new products such as vitamin B-1, synthetic rubber, radio, and television are the result of years of painstaking research rather than the "flash of genius" visualized by the high court.

It seems probable that this Supreme Court ruling has been misconstrued in the lower courts, and that immeasurable harm will be done to science and useful arts which the patent system was intended to protect.

To Mrs. America

Each day, throughout the nation, Mrs. America goes about the job of keeping her home at top efficiency and her family well fed, well clothed, and in good health.

No glamour job has Mrs. America, but a vital one. She is a wartime working girl and her uniform is the familiar apron. She is working all three shifts, putting in sixteen hours a day seven days a week, and her only time and-a-half is the satisfaction she gets out of a job well done for her family, her home, and her country.

One of the reasons why Mrs. America goes about her daily task with confidence is because she knows that behind her is the finest producing organization in the world, one that will provide not only the necessities of war but the abundance of a new peace, in the making of which she is playing such an important part.

FOREWORD

This story was told me largely in the officers' quarters of the Motor Torpedo Boat station at Melville, Rhode Island, by four young officers of MTB Squadron 3, who were all that was left of the squadron which proudly sailed for the Philippines last summer. A fifth officer, Lieutenant Henry J. Brantingham, has since arrived from Australia.

These men had been singled out from the multitude for return to America because General MacArthur believed that the MTB's had proved their worth in warfare, and hoped that these officers could bring back to America their actual battle experience, by which trainees could benefit.

Their Squadron Commander, Lieutenant John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), of course, needs no introduction, as he is already a national hero for his part in bringing MacArthur out of Bataan. But because the navy was then keeping him so busy fulfilling his obligations as a national hero, Bulkeley had to delegate to Lieutenant Robert Bolling Kelly a major part of the task of rounding out the narrative. I think the reader will agree that the choice was wise, for Lieutenant Kelly, in addition to being a brave and competent naval officer, has a sense of narrative and a keen eye for significant detail; two attributes which may never help him in battle but which were of great value to this book. Ensign Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. also contributed much vivid detail.

As a result, I found when I had finished that I had not just the adventure story of a single squadron, but in the background the whole tragic panorama of the Philippine campaign—America's little Dunkirk.

We are a democracy, running a war. If our mistakes are concealed from us, they can never be corrected. Facts are frequently and properly withheld in a war, because the enemy would take advantage of our weaknesses if he knew them. But this story now can safely be told because the sad chapter is ended. The Japanese know just how inadequate our equipment was, because they destroyed or captured practically all of it.

I have been wandering in and out of wars since 1939, and many times before have I seen the sad young men come out of battle—come with the whistle of flying steel and the rumble of falling walls still in their ears—come out to the fat, well-fed clerks behind the lines, where the complacent citizens always choose from the newswstands those papers whose headlines proclaim every skirmish as a magnificent victory.

And through those pump cities the sad young men back from battle wander as strangers in a strange land, talking a grim language of realism which the smug citizenry doesn't understand, trying to tell of a tragedy which few enjoy hearing.

These four sad young men differ from those I have talked to in Europe only in that they are Americans, and the tragedy they bear witness to is our own failure, and the smugness they struggle against is our own complacency.

CHAPTER I

torpedo tubes, and four 50-caliber machine guns—firing in pairs from each side. As for armor, well, there's a story on that. The first time we landed with the Japs one of our machine-gunned kept crouching down behind the shield which rose just under the noses of his guns. When it was over we asked him why he hadn't stood up to fire.

"Hell," he said, "I didn't want to get nicked. I was crouching down behind that armor. Then we had to tell him that shield was  $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch plywood—keeps spray out of your eyes, but it can't stop anything the Japs might send. There isn't an ounce of armor steel on the boat—we're little eggshells, designed to roar in, let fly a Sunday punch, and then get the hell out, zigging to dodge the shells—but again I'm getting ahead."

"We went out to the islands last fall. I was commanding officer of the squadron—I'd picked every officer and man in the outfit from volunteers—told them we were heading for Iwo Jima. So they piled us and our six boats on a tanker. In late summer's a hell of a time to declare war," and rolled over."

"The message said I was to come on down to the Commandant," continued Bulkeley. "It's an old thick-walled Spanish building, and when I got there, Admiral Rockwell, who was in command at Cavite, and Captain Ray, his chief of staff, were already dressed. Dawn was just beginning to break over Manila Bay, and the Admiral was watching the sky. 'They ought to be here any minute,' he said. And then he told me to prepare my six boats for war stations. They were going to send us over to Bataan at the naval base in Mariveles Harbor, just opposite Corregidor."

"I was prepared for the war," said Kelly, the squadron's second in command, a tall blond lieutenant with quick blue eyes. "I'd heard about the secret operation orders—what the fleet would do under any of three eventualities, so the night before I'd gone over to the Army and Navy Club at Manila and put aboard the thickest charcoal-broiled filet mignon I could buy there, plus French fries and a big tomato with Roquefort dressing, finishing off with brandy and a cigar. I figured I'd at least have them to remember."

"We spent that first day fully manned, anticipating a bombing attack. Five of the boats were dispersed along the shore about a hundred yards apart—the sixth was patrolling. All day we loaded them with food—cans of corned beef, Vienna sausage, vegetables, and canned potatoes—don't laugh at that, it's better than rice—canned fruit, fruit, coffee.

"I saw the first planes about noon flying out over the bay. At first I thought they were ours, but after about a minute our shore batteries opened up. They were coming over at 20,000 and of course immediately we shoved all our boats off and out into the bay. But we heard nothing drop. It was probably just a reconnaissance raid—leaving us out.

"Of course there were all kinds of rumors—that Zamboanga and Davao, down in the southern archipelago, had been taken. Also that our navy patrol planes had gone up to Northern Luzon to intercept Jap transports gathering off Aparsi there. We even heard our aircraft tenders had been surprised and taken, but that one proved false. Yet that morning, nothing was sure."

"About three o'clock orders came from Squadron Commander Bulkeley to send three boats, under my command, over to Mariveles on Bataan and report to the submarine tender there for food, water, and torpedoes, and to remain on the ready—available to go out and attack anything he ordered us to. By five o'clock we cast off. We had some passengers to deliver at Corregidor, so it was eight and plenty dark before we were outside the mine fields, feeling our way into Mariveles. We thought we knew those mine fields, but in pitch-darkness, with the mine-field lights turned off and of course no lights on our boats now, it was something like again.

"At this point the army took over. They heard the roar of our motors and thought it was Jap planes.

"Searchlights began winking on all over Bataan, feeling up into the sky for planes—our motors were echoing against the mountains on Bataan, so they couldn't tell where the noise was coming from. Every artillery post for twenty-six kilometers around went on the alert, and for a few minutes it was a question whether we were going to be blown to hell by a mine or by one of our own shore batteries.

"But finally we snaked through, tied up alongside our sub tender, and then its skipper delivered a piece of nasty news. Told us he had orders to get under way just before daylight, out to sea—didn't know just where they were sending him—maybe south, maybe the Dutch East Indies, anyway, he wouldn't be back."

"So then the fun began. There were—no base, rations for only ten days, and a big problem in how we were to live ourselves and what in hell we would do with the boats when the planes came over. In addition to which, we were almost flat out of gas, and what would we do for fuel to fight this war?"

"Pretty soon we began finding some of the answers. For instance just around the coast from Mariveles in Sisiman Cove was a native village—practically abandoned except for a few families—about twenty nipa huts in all. We moved in and took over. A nipa hut is a little contraption—single room with thatched roof and sides—up off the ground four or five feet on bamboo stilts. Under it the natives keep their pigs and chickens. The floor is split bamboo, and never very light, so the crumbs and small pieces of garbage dropped on it can sift down into the pigs and chickens. In one corner of the hut is a sandbox, and on this sand they build a fire for cooking. There never is a chimney—the smoke just goes out the windows or through the floor cracks.

"The night of December 8 we were all asleep in the officers' quarters at Cavite," Bulkeley went on, "when my telephone rang about three in the morning and I first learned the Japs had struck at Pearl Harbor."

"When they shook me, I didn't believe it," said Ensign Akers. "He's a tall, dark silent Texan. 'I was sure they were kidding. I just said,

CHAPTER II

"For the most part we lived on our boats—had to, because we never knew when we would have to haul out into the bay in case of a dive-bomber attack. Anyway we had a base again."

"Next, we found our barges loaded with gasoline in drums which had been towed out into the bay for us by the navy—if they got smacked by bombs, they didn't want them burning near the wharves. There was nobody in charge but a watchman. Each boat holds two thousand gallons, and of course it was a job pouring all that through a funnel. But in addition, it was dangerous, because our motors have to have 100 octane gasoline—airplane grade—and that volatile stuff is more ticklish than dynamite. A little bit of static can make a hell of an explosion, so usually the officers did the nasty jobs of fueling and cleaning gas tanks. No use to ask men to take risks when officers should lead."

"We noticed, as we poured, that this gas had both water and rust in it—yet there was no way to strain it out; we had no charcoal. What we couldn't then know was, this gas had been sabotaged. We'll never find out when or where—the guy who did it is safe, if he's alive. But someone had dissolved wax in it—wax which congealed inside our gas tanks in a coat half an inch thick—wax which clogged our filters so that sometimes we'd have to stop and clean them after an hour's run. That's the fuel we had to fight the war on, we were to find out."

"Then I went over to the section base to make arrangements for our food, and we got another bump. The navy already realized a food shortage was coming and cut us down to two rations a day—breakfast and supper. All you got for lunch was stomach cramps about noon. There was plenty of them."

"I also thought I'd better have the doctor look at my finger. I'd snagged it a few days before and hadn't paid much attention, but now it was swollen about as thick as a walnut. I guessed maybe it was a minor strep infection. What I didn't know was that East streptococci are bigger and meaner than bulldogs and not to be fooled with. He took one look and began to talk about the hospital, but I said the hell with that. I was the second officer of the squadron and badly needed. I couldn't stop the war for a sore finger. Then he said I ought to go over to Corregidor, where they had some sulfa drugs. But that was out, too, because momentarily we expected to be sent out on a mission. Bulkeley had put me in charge of the three boats, and I couldn't leave."

"We settled that I'd come over to see this doctor daily."

"The big alarm came at noon on December 10—we'd pulled up along side a mine sweeper for water when word came that a large flight of Jap planes was headed toward the Manila area, coming from the direction of Formosa. We pulled away from the tender, out into open water, and fifteen minutes later we saw them—several formations—I counted about twenty-seven to twenty-nine planes in each two-motor bomber—lovely, tight, parades ground formations, coming over at about 25,000 feet. But, I thought, when our fighters get up there and start rumpling their hair, those formations won't look so pretty. Only where were our fighters? The Japs passed on out of sight over the mountains, and then we began hearing the rumble of bombs—only first we felt the vibrations on our feet, even out there in the water, and we knew something was catching hell. But what? Manila? Maybe Nichols Field? Or even Cavite, our own base? We couldn't know."

"I did," said Bulkeley laconically. "I was there, at Cavite. The Admiral sent us a two-hour warning that they were coming—from Formosa, and headed on down in our direction across Northern Luzon. So we hauled our boats out into the bay. They kept beautiful formations, all right. The first big V had fifty-four planes in it, and they came in at about 20,000, with their fighters on up above to protect them from ours—only ours didn't show! We couldn't figure it. First they swung over Manila and began to pounce the harbor shipping. It was a beautiful clear day, and I remember the sun made rainbows on the waterspouts of their bombs. They were from a hundred and fifty to two hundred feet high, and it made a mist screen so dense you could hardly tell what was happening to the ships. It turned out nothing much was—they only hit a few."

"But then that big beautiful V pivoted slowly and moved over Cavite—began circling it like a flock of well-disciplined buzzards. They were too high to see the bomb bay doors open, but we could see the stuff drop slowly, picking up speed; only as we watched we found we had troubles of our own. Because five little dive bombers peeled off that formation, one by one, and started straight down for us. When they were down to about fifteen hundred feet, they leveled off and began unloading. Of course we gave our boats full throttle and began circling and twisting, both to dodge the bombs and to get a shot at them. Our gunners loved it. It was their first crack at the Japs. I remember Chalker's face; he's a machinist's mate from Texarkana—a shootin' Texas boy. He was pouring 50-caliber slugs up at them, cooler than a pall of cracked ice, but that long, straight, pointed jaw of his was set. Houlihan, who was firing the other pair of 50's, was the same. They'd picked out one plane and were pouring it up into the sky, when we saw the plane wobble, and pretty soon she took off down the bay, weaving unsteadily, smoking, and off at once, two or three miles away, she just wobbled down into the drink with a big splash. So we know the 35 boat got one. Meanwhile the 31 boat had shot down two more. After that the planes didn't bother strafing the MTB's. Guess the Jap pilots back at their Formosa base passed the word around."

"It certainly surprised our navy too, which had never guessed a torpedo boat could bring down an airplane. Later on I got a kidding message from Captain Ray, chief of staff:

"Dear Buck: I really think your gang is getting too tough. The latest report is that 'Three dive bombers were seen being chased over Mariveles Mountain by an MTB.' Don't you think this is carrying the war a bit too far?"

"About 3:30 the Japs left, so we went back in to Cavite to see what had happened. They'd flattened it—there isn't any other word. Here was the only American naval base in the Orient beyond Pearl Harbor pounded into bloody rubbish. We didn't have time then to think about where our American planes could have been, because the place was a shambles, and we began loading in the wounded to take them to Canacao hospital.

"We went on back to Cavite and offered to carry more wounded. The big base was one sheet of flame except for the ammunition depot. Only a piece of the dock was left, and from the Japs, so they would be depending on our six boats for courier duty to relay all confidential stuff."

"So I wasn't surprised," said Bulkeley, "when early the next morning I got a hurry call to report to the Admiral in Manila. As our 34 boat cleared the mine fields around Bataan, looking over toward Manila I saw something very queer—shipping of all descriptions was pouring out of that Manila breakwater into the open harbor—destroyers, mine sweepers, Yangtze River gunboats, tramp steamers, all going hell for breakfast. And then I saw them—a big formation of about twenty-seven bombers. By then I was beginning to learn that if we saw planes in the air, they would be Japs, not ours. Then came another formation of twenty-nine, and still another of twenty-six."

"If they were after shipping, we shouldn't get too close to the other boats, so I changed course. They wheeled majestically around the bay's perimeter, and each time they passed Manila a load would go whistling down and presently huge columns of black and white smoke began rising—we could even see some fires, although we were still eleven miles away."

"Where in hell is our air force?" our crew kept asking me. "Why in Christ's name don't they do something?"

"But the thing that really got me was that these big Jap formations, circling the bay like it was a parade, maneuver, each time would sail impudently right over Corregidor! Didn't they know we had anti-aircraft guns?"

"They knew all right, but it turned out they knew something I didn't. For presently all twenty of Corregidor's 3-inchers opened fire, and it made me sick to see that every one of their shells was bursting from 5,000 to 10,000 feet below that Jap formation. Those pilots were as safe as though they'd been home in bed. Later I found out what the Japs apparently already knew—that the Rock's anti-aircraft guns didn't have the range. And only then did it begin to dawn on me how completely impotent we were."

"When the Japs cleared out," continued Bulkeley, "Kelly and I headed for Manila and docked about three o'clock. When we reported, Commander Slocum told me the Admiral was considering sending our three boats on a raid off Lingayen, and were we ready? We said we were rarin' to go. So he said to stick around a couple of hours, and meanwhile to load the boats with files, records, and so forth, because they were moving headquarters. It had escaped so far, but right here on the water front it was too vulnerable—sure to get smacked. Through the open door we could see the Admiral conferring with his chief of staff.

"But just then," said Kelly, "Commander Slocum looked down at my arm, which was in a sling, frowned, and said I should get over to see the fleet doctor. The doctor took off the bandage and began to talk tough. Said he couldn't do anything, and that I was to get that arm to a hospital as fast as I could."

"I was dead set on that raid, but I decided it wouldn't be tactful to bring that up, so I said, 'Aye, aye, sir' and skipped it. We loaded the boat with records, and then went back to headquarters, where we were told that the Jap convoy off Lingayen included eight transports and at least two battleships (one of these must have been the one that Colin Kelly later got), but that we weren't going to be sent. They were saving us for 'bigger things.'

"My God!" my junior officer said later, "I didn't know they came any bigger! What do they think we are?"

"Anyway the Admiral patted Bulkeley on the shoulder and said: 'We know you boys want to get in there and fight, but there's no sense sending you on suicidal missions just now.'

"So that was that, and we went out across the bay, to our thatched village.

"You might call the next few days quiet for us, although my arm began giving me hell."

"Presently Bulkeley dropped in on us in the 41 boat, bringing us some stuff issued by the navy to replace everything we'd lost at our quarters in Cavite—a shirt each, underdrawers, a few tubes of toothpaste, and razors—two for each boat, one for the men and one for the officers. But with each razor there were only three packages of blades, so we saw beards in the offing."

"Bulkeley had heard about my hand from a pharmacist's mate and asked me if I could stick it for two more days until he could follow me. He himself had to be on call for consultation with the Admiral, while they needed DeLong and his boat for courier duty. I said 'sure.'

"But the next few days were hell. The whole arm began swelling, and my hand was the size of a catcher's mitt. The nights were worse because I couldn't lie down for any length of time. Also I had to keep my arm held up, or blood running down into it would drive me nuts, and it stiffened that way. The doctor at Mariveles kept offering me morphine, but I didn't dare. There might be an emergency where we'd have to get the boats out to see quickly. Bulkeley had left me in charge, and morphine might make me sleep so hard I couldn't waken for an air-raid alarm. The worst thing was the flies—they kept buzzing around trying to get into that open incision in my finger as I held my hand up in the air. And also I was running a little fever—about four degrees."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Christ Jesus" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, February 28.

The Golden Text was, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and for ever" (Heb. 13: 8).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible, "Behold, the day comes, saith the Lord, that I will raise up unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS" (Jer. 23: 5, 6).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Throughout all generations both before and after the Christian era, the Christ, as the spiritual idea—the reflection of God,—has come with some measure of power and grace to all prepared to receive Christ, Truth, Abraham, Jacob, Moses, and the prophets' enough glorious glimpses of the Messiah, or Christ, which baptized these seers in the divine nature, the essence of Love. The divine image, idea, or Christ was, is, and ever will be inseparable from the divine Principle, God" (p. 332).

News of the Boys in Service

A third star is to be added to the service stars displayed in the window at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Page at Lake Marie, for their daughter, Lorraine, 23, was inducted into the Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps on Feb. 25 and is now awaiting her call to service.

Lorraine has two brothers in service. They are Henry E. Page Jr., with the signal corps at Fort Lewis, Wash., and Earl, who is somewhere in the South Pacific.

Her parents' consent and their good wishes will go with her when she leaves Sunday for Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia.

Another WAAC from Antioch is Miss Betty Grimes, who, as reported last week, will leave on March 4 for Fort Oglethorpe for her basic training.

The girls are reported to have made their decision to serve following the meeting of the local Civilian Defense council at the High school here on Feb. 11, when a recruiting officer of the Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps explained the work of the WAACs.

V.

Charles Dahlke, who has just finished boot training at Great Lakes, is enjoying a furlough here.

Dave Says It's Tough—But He Likes the Army

"The work is very interesting in this engineer battalion, (tough, too)," writes David Nissen from Camp Maxey, Texas. "My work, for the main part, has been painting, and by the time Uncle Sam finishes teaching me the right way to paint it, I should be pretty good at it."

"I might take time to thank you for my subscription to the News and will add that it certainly is an eight-page letter that's very much looked forward to every week. As far as I know no one from Antioch is stationed here or even close by, but I've made a swell bunch of friends here and am far from being lonesome. The chow can't be beat and the weather has been beautiful the last month or so. So all in all things are o. k. around here. Keep up the good work because I can assure you that it is appreciated. I don't think I am speaking out of turn when I speak for all the boys in service from the Antioch region by saying we're proud of our town and the folk in it."

Dave, who was a sign painter before he started working for Uncle Sam, exercises his artistic temperament by drawing rather fancy address designs on envelopes when he writes to his friends. One envelope received here recently had merely a neat design of a shell and the name "Russ," but it found its way to Russell Barthel, manager of the Shell Service station here.

In Port

Hya, Newsounds:

Being rather inarticulate when it comes to expressing gratitude, I will probably make a mess of things. You people cannot really know how much it means for us, especially the boys who are on foreign shores or on ships, to receive our copy of the "News." I generally receive about 5 or 6 copies all at once, as we only receive mail when we make a certain port. So I just line them up in order, and sit down to a swell chat with all the people I know, and some that I don't. It is a fine thing for the people of Antioch, as well as yourselves in your capacity as newspaper men to do. We have one way only to show our appreciation, and that is by getting this over as soon as possible, which you must know we are trying our best to do. And we'll do it, believe me.

I can't tell you much about what goes on, because the subject is "verboten," so you must be content with "shop" talk.

It's hotter than hell down here, but it cools off at night, which helps a little.

We have no place to go on "Liberty" when we are in port which is not very often. About all we can do is have a couple of 3.2 beers, and see a movie, which is generally shown outdoors under swaying palms. It is a swell atmosphere, but at present not very romantic, as I hoped my first visit to the tropics would be. Maybe next time.

I have a suggestion that I am sure will be appreciated by a majority of the service men. If you could see your way clear to send us one of those sheets with all the service men's names and addresses about once a month, it would be very fine. Reason: With an up-to-date list, one is able to keep track of all the fellows, and should the opportunity present itself, we may be able to look each other up. For instance, I saw the change in Kenny Hill's address and I had opportunity to try and look him up. I didn't find him, but I may yet.

Well, this being enough of my drivel for now, I'll shove off. Please keep up the "News" service, it means so much.

Sincerely,
Rodney L. Jacobs, M. M. 2/c

Melvin Skinner writes, giving his new address:

Dear Sirs:

I think it's about time that I wrote you a letter telling what I am doing and where I am.

I am not at Camp Pickett any more. We are at Ilektown Gap, Pa.

It's the best camp that we have ever been in. We're near a couple of big towns. Harrisburg is one of them. It's about 28 miles from our camp. The only thing that I don't like is that they have blue laws in this state. But anyway it's good to be in a good camp.

Last week by buddy and I had a three day pass, so we went to New York. That's about 200 miles from us.

We had a swell time there. We visited the Empire State building. We went up to the top of it. The people look like ants running around. And the automobiles look like toy ones.

We also visited Radio City. We pretty near spent the whole day there. It was so interesting. We also took a ride in the subway. It was lots of fun riding underground. We went all over Times Square and saw many interesting things there. We went to a couple of big night clubs. Had a lot of fun there. I had more fun in New York than any other town that I have been in.

I want to thank you and the people who made it possible for us to get the paper. I sure enjoy getting the Antioch News.

Antioch News,

Gentlemen:

I have been receiving the weekly copies of the Antioch News for some time. It has certainly been a fine thing—I know the other men must feel as I do. There is nothing like an intimate contact with things at home.

I never did get around to thanking the American Legion and the people of Antioch for the check they sent out at Christmas time. However, it isn't too late—and I want to express my sincerest appreciation.

At present I am assigned to a training regiment at the Replacement Center at Fort Sill. Our job is simply to make soldiers out of newly induced recruits.

Again, thanks to everyone.

Best regards,

Fearless Journalism:

At the village primaries held last Tuesday not much excitement was in evidence. There seemed to be no special hankering after the various offices, and taking it as a whole it was a very tame affair from start to finish.

No electioneer was in evidence and many citizens were unaware that a primary was being held.

Final results—leader for president—W. S. Rinear, 15 votes; for trustees, A. Edgar, H. Pitman, leading with 26 votes each; for treasurer, J. E. Brook, 26 votes.

Wednesday a great big overgrown billy-goat was seen wandering around town and at first it was supposed that it belonged to one or another of the secret societies in town, but investigation disclosed the fact that the Woodman goat was secure in its quarters.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Curb on Wheat Production Is Lifted; New Foods Restricted as Housewives Get Initial Taste of 'Point' Rationing; Red Army Drive Meets New Successes

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Hailed as the new scourge of the submarine, this mighty new land-based patrol plane, the Vega PV-1, may prove to be the navy's answer to underwater warfare. The PV-1 carries "ash can" depth charges, or torpedoes, and is the first sub-hunter in production to fill the navy's need for twin-engined, land-based aircraft with plenty of range and striking power.

POINTS:

For Rationing and Study.

Moving quickly, government agencies placed three varieties of food under control as the nation lined up for registration for the No. 2 ration book to be used for canned, bottled and processed vegetables, fruits and juices.

Shortly after the department of agriculture announced rationing of dried beans, peas, lentils and dried and dehydrated soups, the Office of Price Administration placed wholesale ceilings approximating 40 cents a dozen on eggs and froze prices of fresh vegetables at the levels prevailing between February 18 and 22.

These moves put almost 95 percent of all food under some sort of government regulation. The OPA's action came as the nation's housewives still studied the effect of the newly announced point values of the various canned, bottled and processed foods rationed. To many, point values proved much higher than expected and undoubtedly will lead to numerous revisions in family fare.

On top of all this came reports from the Capitol that cheese, butter, fats and oils might be included in the next rationing program, scheduled for meat.

WHEAT BAN:

Has Been Lifted

AAA wheat marketing quotas for 1942 and 1943 have been suspended in what was announced by the department of agriculture to be a move designed to insure adequate wartime supplies of the grain for food—human and livestock.

Under the marketing quota system only wheat grown under their AAA planting allotments could be sold, used or fed by farmers. Excess wheat so disposed of had been subject to a 44 cent per bushel penalty tax for the 1942 crop and it previously had been expected that this penalty would amount to 60 cents on the 1943 crop. With the quotas suspended these restrictions were lifted.

Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard declared that when the 1943 quotas were announced in the fall of last year this country had a record supply of 1,613,000,000 bushels of wheat—enough to supply normal needs for two years. At that time farmers were asked to use extra wheat land for other war crops. Now consumption of wheat for human and livestock food has gone up and as a consequence the restriction had to be lifted to insure supply.

RUSSIANS:

Continue Drive

There was little pause for celebration as Russia's army marked its 25th anniversary, but well the Nazis knew that the Russians had an army. For all along the broad front the German retreat continued. From the northern anchor of the Axis line in South Russia at Orel to the northwest Caucasus the Red drive pushed Hitler's troops toward the Russian border.

Premier Stalin's message on the anniversary proclaimed the mass expulsion of the Axis forces was in flood tide and would not soon abate. He praised his soldiers for their fighting spirit and urged them to be unrelenting in their future battles.

Meanwhile the Berlin radio admitted the Reds were smashing through in several sectors near the Dnieper river, but this source also declared that "we far reaching aims of the enemy had failed."

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the week's news

CANCEL FAST: Catholics in the Chicago archdiocese will not have to fast during the approaching Lenten season. Archbishop Samuel Stritch suspended the fasting regulations on papal authority. Increased productive efforts and the rationing program are believed to have led to the decision. Meatless Fridays will remain in effect, however.

LOST: According to Wilfrid Gallicane, British consul, Britain has lost 2,700 bombers in raids over Germany.

AFRICAN RESOURCES: American ships used to transport food and other goods to French North Africa have returned to the United States loaded with cobalt, ore, cork and tanbark, raw materials obtained from the occupied territory.

ALLIED ACTION:

Renewed Demands

Renewed demands in London for a second front came from two sources on the heels of Josef Stalin's warnings that "the enemy has not yet been defeated."

Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador to London, in a fighting speech declared that Russia expects "an early realization of the military decisions taken at Casablanca."

While acknowledging that the successes of the Soviet army were "very encouraging," Maisky pointed out that they were being achieved at a tremendous cost of Russian lives and property. It is natural, therefore, he said, that the USSR expects early Allied action.

Speaking before the house of lords, Lord Benverbrook reiterated demands for a second front, declaring that "Whatever may be the plans of the Germans, we should strike and strike now before they can regroup their divisions . . . If another attack is made on Russia, June may be the date, so we must strike quickly if we are to be ready. We must invade northwestern Europe now."

FINLAND:

Tired of War

Ever since the re-election of President Risto Ryti the world had wondered whether Finland would make a bid for separate peace with Russia.

When Finland called home her ministers to the Vatican and Germany the rumors of a separate peace bid were given impetus. But official dispatches from Helsinki announced that Georg A. Gripenberg and Toivo M. Kivimaki, ministers respectively to the Vatican and Berlin, had been summoned home "for negotiations" in the hope of a peace settlement.

In three places American and British forces checked the pace of a German advance in Tunisia. One Nazi column, attempting a desperate push on to Thala, was stopped four miles south of the town. Bombers and fighters checked another strong attack on the road leading to Tebessa from Kasserine, and farther north, near Rohaa, a heavy German patrol ran into serious trouble when it attacked British forces.

It was sent rolling back by crack British infantry.

The Nazi column moving toward Tebessa was bombed by continuous relays of American warplanes.

Fighters and bombers attacked the Kasserine bottleneck in more than a score of missions.

But it was evident that our forces had suffered reverses.

ARMED FORCES:

Let George Do It

"Since when has America adopted as its national policy, 'Let George do it?'" asked Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, as he discussed the need for putting 10,000,000 men into the armed forces by the end of this year. He defended this plan by declaring that this was the number needed as judged by the commands and staffs of both the army and the navy.

"Full account has been taken of the ability of American industry and labor and agriculture to produce the supplies needed by our forces, our Allies and by our civilian economy," said Patterson, and he went on to point out that China had been actually engaged in warfare for five and a half years, that Great Britain by the defense of its homeland had come the closest of the United Nations to an "all out" struggle and further advanced the point that the Russians "have killed more Nazis than all the other United Nations combined."

Then he inquired whether it was U. S. policy to "Let George do it?"

U-BOATS:

Still Grave Menace

Sinking of two American transports in the North Atlantic with a loss of 830 lives underlined a statement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that the submarine remains a grave menace to the entire Allied war effort.

Coincident with his statement, Knox revealed that an American destroyer succeeded in trapping a U-boat in the Atlantic and sinking it with a barrage of five-inch shells. An American gun crew aboard a freighter fired four shots to sink a Jap submarine that had torpedoed and severely crippled their craft in the Pacific, Knox also revealed.

In Washington, Edward R. Stettinius, lend-lease administrator, told the house foreign affairs committee that the United States will leave "no stone unturned" to get increased material aid to China. Stettinius answered charges by Representative Maas of Minnesota, a marine reserve officer who saw action in the Pacific, that "we are not getting all the aid we can to China."

MERCHANT SEAMEN: Lauded by Marines

Charges that merchant seamen refused to unload ships at Guadalcanal were denied by a house naval affairs subcommittee which reported that in all cases American merchant seamen co-operated fully with marines in the Solomon Islands. The subcommittee's report included letters from highest marine corps officials praising "co-operation, efficiency and courage" of U. S. merchant seamen.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

BY HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union)

Lesson for March 7

BIBLE TEACHINGS AGAINST DRUNKENNESS

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 30:16, 17; (Isaiah 28:14, 7; Galatians 5:19-21). GOLDEN TEXT—"Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it"—Isaiah 28:8.

Sowing and reaping is one of those universal laws which applies in all realms of life. What we sow we reap, whether in the farmer's field, in our national life, or in the life of the individual. It is true physically, mentally, morally and spiritually.

How surprising then that intelligent Americans think we can go on with the use of intoxicants which have destroyed other nations and expect to escape the same and consequences. Professional men have wrecked their careers, business men lost their hard-earned positions, and rich men dissipated their inheritances; and at the same time each of them has fallen into moral decay—all through their inability to control their desire for drink. Yet we continue to license its sale, and so another generation of young men must meet the same temptation.

Our lesson presents three results of drunkenness.

I. Military Defeat (I Sam. 30:16, 17).

A crisis in the life of King David is related in this chapter. The Amalekites had taken Ziklag. The King and his family were prisoners, held by a host of barbarous men far too strong for them to oppose. He inquired of God and was told to attack. With his little army of 400 men he defeated them. Why? Because in a drunken debauch they were celebrating their victory of the day before.

This was not the first, nor the last, time that military defeat followed indulgence in alcoholic beverages. It has happened even in the present war. Have we learned the lesson? Will we avoid that danger?

In this country our armed forces and defense workers are constantly exposed to temptation—and how many of them fall, anyone may know who has eyes to see.

From distant battlefronts come disquieting reports that intoxicants are among the "supplies" which find quick transportation to the very front, where they are soon put to their destructive use.

II. National Decay (Isa. 28:1-4, 7).

Isaiah was a mighty voice against moral corruption, and for the righteousness of God. With true prophetic insight he saw beneath the outward prosperity and apparent glory of his people, and exposed the sins which would soon destroy them as a nation. Outstanding among these destructive forces was drunkenness.

Turning first to the northern kingdom of Israel (for the nation had now been divided), he tells them that though their valleys may be fertile and their cities resplendent, the collapse of all their boasted greatness will surely come if they live in revelry and drunkenness.

He speaks of the coming of "the mighty and the strong one" (v. 2) who will be like a destroying storm. He refers to Assyria—itself an ungodly people, but used of God to scourge His own people who had become indulgent and sinful.

There is a truth here which we need to learn. When nations forget God and fail in their responsibilities to Him and to their fellow men; when they become vain and self-indulgent, God will bring judgment upon them. He may use as His instrument nations who are themselves pagan, to accomplish His purpose.

The people should be led in repentence and righteousness by their religious leaders. How sad that some set an example in the other direction. Others who live personal lives above reproach are silent on these important questions lest they give offense to someone who may make it difficult for them. How sad!

III. Eternal Destruction (Gal. 5:19-21).

Military loss and national declension should be enough to align every right-thinking person against intoxicants. But far worse is the fact that they bring many, many men and women into eternal separation from God.

In this passage "drunkenness and revellings" find their proper place with the other works of the flesh which close the door to the kingdom of God. There is no use trying to dismiss or cover it up as the unfortunate weakness of an otherwise nice person, or the natural result of a bit of social fellowship.

America has too long regarded a drunken person as a joke—or at most a bit of a nuisance to be indulged and tolerated. The Bible says that "they who practice such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God" (v. 21).

That is plain enough, isn't it? Mr. Drinker, outside or inside the church, had you better not think about that before you drink again? Church of Christ, is it not time for you to do something more effective to deliver the young men and women of America from the constant temptation now placed before them?

USELESS SPENDING

Senator Harry F. Byrd, in a recent press release, said in part:

"The United States Civil Service Commission reports as of August 31, 1942, that there were 2,000,300 employees of the United States government. On Armistice Day, November 11, 1918, there was a total of 917,780 civilian federal employees. We have three times that many now. In the last World War we had one civilian employee for every four and one-half members in the armed service. In this war, we have so far one civilian employee to every one and three-fourths members of the armed forces, the ratio being two and one-half times more per soldier, and we are still increasing our civilian personnel at the rate of over 3,000 daily. On November 11, 1918, there were thirty agencies of the government. Today there are 81 distinct agencies, many of these making no direct contribution to the war effort."

This remarkable statement should receive the careful consideration of every American citizen. When we consider that, since the release by Senator Byrd, the President has submitted his budget to Congress for the fiscal year, calling for 100 billion dollars for our war effort and nine billion additional for civic expenditures, we gain some idea of what the conduct of this war is going to mean in the tax burden of the next generation.

Curtail Civic Spending
No one wants to limit a single activity necessary to win the war, but just ordinary common sense and economy indicate that every unnecessary civic expenditure should wait until the emergency of war has passed.

Right now our new Congress is confronted with the problem of preventing excessive profits on war contracts. Present law provides for "renegotiation" of their separate contracts by the Army and Navy departments and the Maritime commission. There are some three million of these contracts, but probably not 5 per cent will show excessive profits after taxation.

The Internal Revenue department will find every case of excessive profits and, where such profits remain after taxes, can report such cases for "renegotiation." This is practical economy and does the job the most efficient way.

Industry and agriculture, both of which feel the pinch of shortage of manpower, should support Congress in any method it decides upon as practical and economical. Preventing new additions to the payrolls and cutting out useless civic expenditures and payrollers who have nothing to do that is constructive in the war effort will help solve the manpower problem and ease the burden of taxes.

TRIM SHIP FOR ACTION!

We are engaged in a war to save our American tradition of liberty and opportunity for ourselves and our children. Our leaders have committed us to become the arsenal of democracy; to furnish food for our allies; through our lend-lease to help finance the Allied war machine and, finally, to raise and equip an army of some 10 million men.

Any one of these jobs is a tremendous undertaking. We are thousands of miles from the theater of war, and this involves tremendous problems of transportation. All of these jobs together will tax every resource of the United States. Already we face rationing and priorities in our materials and acute shortage of manpower, and burden of taxes which indicates our financial resources are strained to the utmost.

Of a certainty, we must have complete unity if we are to do this job, and face the postwar future with hope and confidence.

American industry, agriculture and finance must use to the maximum the productive power, initiative and intelligence latent in every American.

No Time or Place for Drunks

There must be no drunks hidden away in public payrolls, engaged in peacetime experiments which are useless under the emergency of war. Every branch of our military service is devoted to the sole purpose of fighting and winning this war. Our government, both local, state and national, should inspire and lead in the support of our civilian population gives to the war effort. Unnecessary civic expenditures, surplus payrollers, useless economic and social experiments have no place in a war emergency.

The new Congress is tackling this job with a will and a purpose. Those Congressmen are our representatives and we, the people, should support them to the limit. Right now they are trying to bring some order and efficiency in the prevention of excessive profits in war contracts by the Army, Navy and Maritime commission. The present law, passed by the old Congress, provides for a "renegotiation" of their war contracts by each department.

New Bureaus Not Needed

There are over three million of these contracts. Not more than 5 per cent will show any excessive profits after taxes have been paid. The ordinary man on the street would say that the Internal Revenue Department can easily discover any excess profit from any war contract. Certainly we can use the manpower that would be wasted to much better advantage in other places.

We, the people, want Congress to adopt the most direct, efficient and economical method of doing this job. None of us believes in excess profits on war contracts. There are ceiling prices on most things we produce. Now let's get at the job of cutting down unnecessary civic expenditures and cutting unnecessary payrollers off the payroll.

WE ARE AMERICANS

Our United States is a government by all, conceived and dedicated by and with the consent of the governed. It constantly promotes individual dignity, worth and opportunity; guarantees to every citizen freedom of religion, speech, assembly, press and petition; safeguards private property; maintains equal justice before the law; provides free schools for all, and constantly seeks social and economic security and the blessings of liberty for young and old.

This is our country. Individuals or groups may have fallen short or failed in their duty, but we, the people, press on to our destiny. We, the people, love and cherish our Republic. We pledge support for its institutions with our lives and sacred honor.

Sequoit News

Coach of Fighting Sequoits to Leave for U. S. Navy

(By Tod Mapleton and Virginia Poulsen)

C. A. Wolsinbarger, the coach of the fighting Sequoits, leaves for the Navy the end of next week to train a group of better fighters for the U. S. Navy. On March 12 he goes to Chapel Hill, North Carolina, where he will undergo thirty days of indoctrination training. After that he will take over the conditioning of pre-flight students enlisted in the Navy's V-5 program.

Coach, as he is commonly called around the school, has had an almost perfect record during his two years at Antioch Township High school. He has coached the fighting Sequoits through two Northwestern Conference football championships and one District basketball championship.

"I've never had a finer group of students to work with in all my nine years of coaching. I've learned to love them from the bottom of my heart and I hope that when the war is over I can return to the school I love," stated Ensign Wolsinbarger. Mrs. Wolsinbarger and children, Sue and Bill, are planning to remain in Antioch.

Home Economics Class Is Busy

(By Clare Sienh)

The entire Home Economics department has been very busy lately. The Sophomores are having a course in preparing teas and soon plan to give one, although they have not yet decided upon their guests. Later in the month we hope to have more definite news about this tea.

The freshmen are centering upon their work on sewing and are very busy making school clothing. Most of the sewing is being done in cotton so the girls will have clothes for spring and summer use.

In connection with their unit on child development the junior class has had many opportunities for interesting visits or "field trips." Each day during the past week two different junior girls have gone down to the grade school to observe children of kindergarten age. In addition to that the class was afforded an opportunity to watch the care of a baby when it went to Coach Wolsinbarger's home to see little William.

Shorthand Students Get Down to Real Work

(By Sarah McBride)

Last semester the students in beginning shorthand were taught the theory of shorthand. They are now applying those principles in reading dictation and trying to increase their speed in either. They are taking dictation on practice material at eighty words per minute and on new material at approximately sixty words per minute.

The students in advanced shorthand are trying to increase their speed in dictation and in transcription on the typewriter. The main objective in transcription is to produce mailable copies rapidly. They are also getting actual secretarial practice in shorthand and typing through the application of knowledge obtained in class discussion. The procedure is the same as they could expect to experience in actual business work.

Military Men Revisit Their Alma Mater

(By Pat Ryan)

During the past few weeks, school has been literally overrun with boys in the service. It seems they like to return once more to the halls of learning. All of us have enjoyed their visits. The stories they have told have been inspirational to some of the boys who are interested in joining the armed forces. They also gave the boys an idea of what their lives may be like in a few short months. Those who returned to their alma mater for a short stay are:

(Navy)—Charles Dalbke, Norman Edwards, and Parker Hazen;

(Army)—Charles Anderson, Art Small, Red Morton, and Sidney Hughes;

(Coast Guard)—Ted Larson.

Forty Percent of English Words Derived from Latin

(By Eleanor Norton)

Having any trouble with your words? If so, just bring them in to the Latin II class at Antioch High. The Ethyl gasoline advertisements have nothing on them. They are getting pretty good at the derivation of words, since they have been studying word derivation for about two weeks. They find the language derivation, the literal meaning, and the English words derived from a particular word or "problem." Each Latin student takes a certain word and draws a picture representing its literal meaning. The class finds it both informative and interesting work.

Freshmen Sponsor Party

(By Charles Jorgensen)

The freshman class is sponsoring a party which will be held the evening of Friday, March 5, for the sophomores. At the beginning of the school term the sophomores gave a party for the freshmen, so this party will be a continuation of the entertaining that is done by the lower classmen. Games and dancing have been planned for entertainment. Sandwiches and hot chocolate will be served.

The advisers of the freshman class are Miss. Reynolds and Mr. Kroll. They and the class hope that all sophomores will be able to come.

The Eternal Struggle

Ever stop to think that nearly every item in your favorite newspaper is about a fight—about some form of competition or struggle. All political news is about the battle of different men for pre-eminence. Society news has to do mostly with the struggle for "position." Other fights may be between baseball teams, corporation and the courts, prize fighters, capital and labor. Even a review of a new play is about a contest, for if the plot did not include a struggle, the play wouldn't be worth reviewing.—Fred C. Kelly.
